SUBJECT: City Council Goals Update

ISSUE BEFORE THE COUNCIL:

The City Council met in November 2012 for their biennial Council Advance to set goals for the coming years. Staff has prepared a report to update the Council on these goals.

EXECUTIVE SUMMARY:

In November 2012, the City Council convened with the City of Tualatin Management Team for a Council Advance. The group had a facilitated discussion over a two-day period to discuss community trends and goals for the coming years. The City's management team reconvened in January 2013 to identify actions for achieving these goals. These actions comprise the City's organizational work plan. This work plan in addition to the City's other visioning documents and Capital Improvement Plan help to guide the work of the organization.

A report was compiled to help summarize the goals and actions, and staff will provide an update on the goals in a presentation at the February 24th Work Session.

INTRODUCTION

To the Council and the Community

In November 2012, the City Council convened with the City of Tualatin Executive Management Team for a Council “Advance.” This weekend long event was titled an “Advance” rather than the traditional name of a “Retreat” due to the forward direction the Council wants to take the community. A professional facilitator was hired to lead the group through a two-day discussion about the current community trends, the environmental context of the community and organization, and develop goals for the coming years for Council and staff to work together on implementing.

In addition to the discussion regarding the Council Goals, the Council also discussed their commitment and plan for working together over the coming years.

These goals were graphically captured by the facilitator, Jim Oswald, and can be found in the appendix of this report. The City’s management team gathered in January 2013 to discuss the goals of the Council and translate them into actions. These actions comprise the organization’s work plan for the coming years. In the pages which follow you will see the progress made on the work plan since 2013. There are many accomplishments to celebrate, and many exciting projects for which work will continue in the coming years.

The City Council’s leadership in setting high-level goals for the community is important to the organization’s work. Working together, the City Council, City staff and the community have much to look forward to.

Sincerely,

Sherilyn Lombos
City Manager

COMMUNITY TRENDS AND DRIVERS OF CHANGE

A Changing Environment and a Responsive Organization

The facilitator led the Council and Management Team through a discussion where the group identified the many drivers of change in Tualatin. Change drivers are large scale forces which produce change throughout an organization and in various levels of the community. Typically, these change drivers consist of community or regional demographic, economic, technological, and other factors that create a changing environment to which organizations must adapt. Government organizations must continually reevaluate the way they do business and provide service, and seek to respond faster, use resources more efficiently, and produce high quality work and services.

INCREASING COSTS OF SERVICES

The group identified increasing costs of services as a major driver of change. The costs of services are on the rise and while the Tualatin staff works hard to keep costs down, there are many costs which are out of the City's control. Communities are forced to look for ways to generate revenue and balance that with protecting community livability. Economic development is essential to support and sustain a growing community, but growth can have implications on neighborhoods. Engaging citizens and improving communication and outreach regarding these competing values is an important part of the process.

INCREASED TRAFFIC IN THE SW CORRIDOR

Traffic is Tualatin's number one problem, and the City continues to work on funding current needs and planning for future needs. Tualatin is part of the Southwest Corridor which continues to grow with new people and businesses; however, transit to support this growth is falling behind. Communities are working with TriMet, Metro and other regional partners to look at how our City can better support future transit enhancements. Tualatin sits at the nexus of major transportation routes, and the City must be proactive in our approach to find funding to address the City's transportation needs.

LIGHTENING FAST TECHNOLOGY

Technology is major driver of change across all communities, and this is no different in Tualatin. The City wants to attract the tech companies in the metro, in addition to looking at ways to integrate technology into our own service delivery models. As Tualatin residents and businesses continue to embrace new technology, the City must also look for ways to stay connected through providing services online and staying engaged in various social media platforms.

COMMUNITY TRENDS AND DRIVERS OF CHANGE

CHANGING DEMOGRAPHICS

Tualatin's physical attributes have not only changed over the years, but we have also seen the faces in our community change. These demographic changes have placed different and new demands on City services. We have an aging population and the older adults and baby boomers are looking for new ways to participate in their community. The City has taken over the operations at the Juanita Pohl Center, and it has seen increasing demands for programming and services for Tualatin adults ages 50 and better. The City has also seen significant increases in the City's Hispanic population in the last 10 years. This demographic change also provides new demands on City services.

NEED FOR EDUCATIONAL OPPORTUNITIES

In recent years, a growing demand for educational opportunities has forced the community to assess what is currently being offered and look for ways to partner with education providers to meet the needs of students in grades K-12, the Tualatin work force, and older adults. There are many institutions in and near Tualatin who provide learning opportunities, but finding ways to identify specific needs and make those services more accessible to the community are some of the challenges which will need to be addressed.

ENVIRONMENTAL SCAN

What's happening around us?

OVERVIEW

The purpose of the environmental scan is to provide context for the goal setting. The scan allows the Council and staff to look at what is currently underway in the community and what has changed in the past few years. City staff presented information regarding updates on recent organizational changes, projects planning for the future of the community, major infrastructure improvements, and advances in citizen involvement.

ORGANIZATIONAL CHANGE

The faces in the organization have changed in the past few years. Since 2011, five out of ten executive management team members have changed resulting in a fresh approach and many new ideas, but also meaning a loss of stability and institutional knowledge. The City has a new leadership team, and while the organization may experience some growing pains, there are also many welcome changes which will result in better service to the community. New people have brought many new skills to the organization which has allowed for some restructuring for more efficient service delivery both internally and externally.

Communication has taken center stage in Tualatin. We have a community which is very engaged and involved, and with constantly changing technology and the expectation of immediate access to information the City has been required to change with the times. Tualatin is working to improve its communications both internally and externally. Part of our efforts in the coming years includes looking at how our mission, vision and values are communicated throughout the organization.

PLANNING FOR THE FUTURE

To continue building a great community, the City works diligently with the community, our regional partners, and neighboring jurisdictions to plan for future growth and improvements. There are many efforts currently underway which will help shape Tualatin for decades to come. The City recently completed the Transportation System Plan (TSP) update which helps to identify and prioritize the community's major transportation projects for the next ten years. We continue to plan for transit improvements as well through projects like Linking Tualatin, Metro's SW Corridor Study, and TriMet's SW Service Enhancement Plan. The City is also working on many concept plans for areas including Basalt Creek, Southwest Concept Plan, Stafford, and the Ice Age Tonquin Trail. There are also many other initiatives which are underway or will begin in the coming years including the Tualatin Tomorrow Vision Plan Update, the Economic Development Strategic Plan, and the Parks Master Plan. All of these plans will include comprehensive public involvement strategies, and they will result in a road map for the future of Tualatin.

ENVIRONMENTAL SCAN

INFRASTRUCTURE IMPROVEMENTS

Tualatin has been very responsible in improving, maintaining and investing in its infrastructure. City staff developed the first Capital Improvement Plan (CIP) in 2012 to help in providing a more comprehensive look at the City's infrastructure needs and assist the Council in establishing priorities for infrastructure investments over a five-year period. Some of the major investments in recent years include the complete renovation of the north end of Community Park, the new Gateway entrance at Nyberg and Tualatin Sherwood Road, the expansion of the Juanita Pohl Center, Leveton Drive extension, and the ongoing pavement maintenance which happens throughout the City each year. These improvements help to maintain the quality of life and the infrastructure the Tualatin community expects and makes Tualatin an attractive place in which to locate a business.

CITIZEN INVOLVEMENT

Citizen involvement has been a major focus in Tualatin over the past few years, and the City has done many things to enhance its communication efforts across all departments and has taken a close look at new ways to engage with residents on many important topics. The City launched a new website to improve the City's image and profile, increase citizen self-service capability, and improve overall communications and transparency. The new Citizen Involvement Organization (CIO) Program was also implemented which began as a grass roots effort to organize neighborhood and business groups to help engage citizens in their community. These CIOs have proven to be an effective way to disseminate information across the community. The Police Department's efforts in community policing have been not only effective, but very popular. The Police Department began the Citizen's Police Academy allowing residents to immerse themselves in a hands-on learning experience about the challenges the police encounter in their everyday work. Citizen engagement efforts were recalibrated with the update of the City's Transportation System Plan (TSP). The City embraced new strategies to help engage the entire community in planning for community transportation needs for the next ten years. Tools such as the online forum, an iPhone App, open houses, working groups, outreach at community events, and a task force helped the City to engage a broad and diverse segment of the community. Other programs such as the City's social media efforts, volunteer programs, citizen surveying efforts and more have changed how Tualatin involves citizens.
